The academy headquarters consisted of the adjutant, the athletic officer, the paymaster and about ten other officers (instructors)

The headquarters company consisted of about 200 men, 30 horses for riding instruction, eight to ten horse-drawn vehicles, two passenger cars and two trucks.

Each company of the one-year course consisted of the company commander, the company headquarters and four platoons of 48-50 trainees each.

The three-month course was conducted by an officer with headquarters personnel and consisted of two platoons of 45 trainees each.

There were 60 trainess attending the six-month course. The participants were graduates of the Kossuth Academy.

The number of trainees varied, as some participants were dropped because of poor progress and bad political conduct.

5. Subjects:

Political economics: Instruction based on Das Kapital by Karl Marx.

Sociology: Development of social forms from antiquity to the present time was taught there. Special stress was laid on socialism.

History: Instruction in this field covered the time from the migration of nations up to the present. Special attention was paid to the Communist upheavals after World War I.

Farty history: Instruction in this field dealt with the period from the establishment of the 1st International up to the present time. Special stress was laid on the great Communists, such as Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin. Rakosi was the only Hungarian Communist who was mentioned there. Literature: Instruction in this field was confined to Communist authors.

Tacties: Instruction in this field focused on the tactical employment of the squad. The service manuals used were selected accordingly.

Terrain appreciations

Organization: Instruction in this field was confined to infantry units up to and including regimental level.

Ordnance instruction: In this field the trainees were trained with weapons used in the Hungarian army. Most of these weapons were infantry equipment and light field pieces of Soviet type. New Soviet rifles were distributed to the trainees during this course.

Organizational administration: In this field special stress was laid on the exact knowledge of company administration and pay according to army regulations.

6. Instruction methods:

The instructors presented their subjects without using notes. They did not express personal opinions and no discussions were held. Every subject was repeated the afternoon of the same day. The trainees were them examined.
